What about doing some races or organized tours?

Just about anywhere in the world you find groomed trails and/or consistent skiing you will find some sort of competitive event or organized tour. Cross country ski racing is one of the world's great participation sports with the biggest events attracting up to 18,000 participants and the smallest as few as a couple dozen local skiers. The best international skiers are global celebrities and widely recognized as some of the greatest (if not the very best) aerobic athletes on the planet. However, the vast majority of skiers in "citizen" races are folks just like yourself that just wanted to get together with some other people and have a good time.

For younger folks, school leagues and junior racing programs are offered in many parts of the U.S., Canada, New Zealand, the U.K., and Australia.
